Contents

A series of digital illustrations done with a drawing tablet and mouse. Inspired by image boards, character maps, wing dings, and the big glowing screen in front of me.

The internet has always felt like another home. A home filled with hostile strangers and relentless advertisements. Sometimes, those hostile strangers become my hostile friends.

There's nothing here. I checked everywhere. I'm not saying it's your fault, but I had nothing to do with this. Please go back and try your query again. Look, like I said, buddy, there's nothing here. Get lost. You're starting to creep me out.

Being here all the time, it's changing me. I can't say if that's good or bad. But I'm never-alone. That probably sounds weird, right? We all need to be alone sometimes. Well, I am alone. I'm alone even when I'm connected to all of you. So, I am constantly and never alone at the very same time, all the time. You are all there, and I am here. We are separate, but together. I feel like I should stop thinking about this before my brain melts ... thanks for listening
